INTEREST OF *AMICUS CURIAE*¹

Amici are students whose right to bodily privacy is directly threatened by the reinterpretation of Title IX by the Departments of Education and Justice to supplement or supplant the term “sex” with “gender identity.” Student Amici are joined in this Brief by their parents and guardians who similarly have constitutional rights at stake, as well as grandparents and individual and organizational community members who are concerned about maintaining students’ right to bodily privacy. Appendix A lists them in full. The students attend public schools throughout the country that are subject to the May 13, 2016 Dear Colleague Letter issued by the Departments of Education and Justice. It is their constitutional right to bodily privacy that is negatively impacted by the Letter and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit’s decision. The National and State Family Policy Councils are non-partisan, non-profit organizations that exist to strengthen families in their respective states through citizen advocacy and education. These organizations’ interest in this case derives directly from their members throughout the nation whose rights to bodily privacy are harmed by the Letter and appellate court's decision. Appendix B lists them in full.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Efforts to eliminate the sex-specific nature of restrooms and locker rooms in public schools cannot be analyzed apart from the constitutional right to bodily privacy. That right limits the application of sex-nondiscrimination laws in a variety of contexts, including those involving equal opportunity in employment, access to places of public accommodation, and access to facilities in public schools. Decades of case law have established that, in light of the right of bodily privacy, sex-nondiscrimination laws do not grant opposite-sex persons access to single-sex facilities where privacy interests are at their strongest and bodily exposure is commonplace.

The appellate court's decision ignored these precedents. Placing students in circumstances where their privacy is compromised and they are at risk of bodily exposure in the vicinity of members of the opposite sex is not only demeaning and humiliating, but also denies individuals' personal dignity. The negative effects of such exposure are particularly severe when students are involved because children are still physically, emotionally, and psychologically developing and are particularly body conscious. Courts have thus refused to require schools to open sex-specific locker rooms, showers, and restrooms to all students because permanent emotional impairment could result from the deprivation of students' bodily-privacy rights. Instead, they have allowed schools to craft common sense solutions that respect every students' privacy, including those struggling with gender identity issues, by creating single-occupancy restrooms and changing rooms as an additional option for anyone uncomfortable using the communal facilities with others of the same sex.

These courts have recognized that the constitutional right of bodily privacy is defined by reasonable expectations, not the bohemian leanings of a few, and that laws aimed at eliminating sex discrimination were designed to create equal opportunities for women and men, not to force new privacy mores on the American public. This Court should do the same and grant certiorari to review the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. Certainly, when the right to bodily privacy protects even an imprisoned felon from unnecessary exposure to the opposite sex, then it surely protects the adolescent girl from the same risk of exposure to students who are indisputably biologically and physically a male.

ARGUMENT

Title IX bans “discrimination” against a student enrolled in an educational program receiving federal financial assistance “on the basis of sex.” 20 U.S.C. § 1681. But it does not prohibit taking basic anatomy and respect for others' bodily privacy rights into account. The Code of Federal Regulations abounds with measures approving “separate toilet, locker room, and shower facilities on the basis of sex” for students, as long as they are “comparable.”² And it does so for one simple reason: sex-nondiscrimination laws have never granted members of the opposite sex regular access to single-sex facilities where privacy rights are at their strongest and bodily exposure is commonplace.

Nondiscrimination laws serve laudable goals, but if taken to unreasonable extremes, they may infringe upon other's constitutional rights. Cf. Boy Scouts of Am. v. Dale, 530 U.S. 640, 657 (2000) (striking down the application of a nondiscrimination law under the First Amendment); Hurley v. Irish-Am. Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Grp. of Bos., 515 U.S. 557, 579 (1995) (same). The reach of laws prohibiting discrimination based on sex, in particular, is limited by the fundamental right of bodily privacy. As explained below, whether public schools, general employment, places of public accommodation, or prison confinement are at issue, the constitutional right of bodily privacy is well established. This established right should lead the Court to grant certiorari and reverse the appellate court's decision here.

I. Title IX Does Not Require Schools to Violate Bodily Privacy Rights By Allowing Students to Use Locker Rooms, Showers, and Restrooms of the Opposite Sex.

Title IX does not provide an entitlement for any student to use locker rooms, showers, restrooms, or overnight accommodations—where students’ privacy interests are at their pinnacle—of the opposite sex. The unambiguous language of Title IX and its implementing regulations clearly allow school districts to determine individually whether they will, or will not, maintain sex-specific facilities.³ For example, educational entities can “maintain[] separate living facilities for the different sexes.” 20 U.S.C. § 1686. They can “provide separate housing on the basis of sex,” 34 C.F.R. 106.32, and “provide separate toilet, locker room, and shower facilities on the basis of sex.” 34 C.F.R. 106.33. Schools can “separat[e] ... students by sex within physical education classes” and have “separate sessions for boys and girls” during classes “that deal primarily with human sexuality.” 34 C.F.R. § 106.34. Thus, in situations where privacy—or common sense—dictates that boys and girls should be separated, Title IX authorizes schools to do just that.

Indeed, as the legislative history of Title IX illustrates, the bill’s sponsors were keenly aware of the privacy and safety implications of the law and specifically stated that it was not designed to deprive schools of the ability to have sex-specific facilities for students where privacy and safety is paramount. When Senator Birch Bayh first introduced the legislation, Senator Dominick asked about the scope of the law:

Mr. DOMINICK. The provisions on page 1, under section 601, refer to the fact that no one shall be denied the benefits of any program or activity conducted, et cetera. The words "any program or activity," in what way is the Senator thinking here? Is he thinking in terms of dormitory facilities, is he thinking in terms of athletic facilities or equipment, or in what terms are we dealing here? Or are we dealing with just educational requirements?

I think it is important, for example, because we have institutions of learning which, because of circumstances such as I have pointed out, may feel they do not have dormitory facilities which are adequate, or they may feel, as some institutions are already saying, that you cannot segregate dormitories anyway. But suppose they want to segregate the dormitories; can they do it?

Mr. BAYH. The rulemaking powers referred to earlier, I think, give the Secretary discretion to take care of this particular policy problem. I do not read this as requiring integration of dormitories between the sexes, nor do I feel it mandates the desegregation of football fields.

What we are trying to do is provide equal access for women and men students to the educational process and the extracurricular activities in a school, where there is not a unique facet such as football involved. We are not requiring that intercollegiate football be desegregated, nor that the men's locker room be desegregated.

117 Cong. Rec. 30407 (1971) (emphasis added).

The following year, when Title IX was finally passed, Senator Bayh again reiterated that it was not meant to force men and women to share facilities where their privacy rights would be violated:

These regulations would allow enforcing agencies to permit differential treatment by sex only [sic]—very unusual cases where such treatment is absolutely necessary to the success of the program—such as in classes for pregnant girls or emotionally disturbed students, in sports facilities or other instances where personal privacy must be preserved.

118 Cong. Rec. 5807 (1972) (emphasis added).⁴

The same concerns were raised when Title IX was debated in the House. Representative Thompson, concerned about men and women using the same facilities, offered an amendment:

I have been disturbed however, about the statements that if there is to be no discrimination based on sex then there can be no separate living facilities for the different sexes. I have talked with the gentlewoman from Oregon (Mrs. Green) and discussed with the gentlewoman an amendment which she says she would accept. The amendment simply would state that nothing contained herein shall preclude any educational institution from maintaining separate living facilities because of sex. So, with that understanding I feel that the amendment [exempting undergraduate programs from Title IX] now under consideration should be opposed and I will offer the “living quarters” amendment at the proper time.

117 Cong. Rec. 39260 (1971) (emphasis added). This amendment was eventually introduced and passed.

⁴ Few things can make it more plain that Title IX was drafted with an understanding that “sex” refers to the binary male/female reproductive nature of mankind than this reference to “pregnancy,” which is an impossibility for all persons professing a change from male to female.

117 Cong. Rec. 39263 (1971).

Thus, when Title IX's text, implementing regulations, and legislative history are read together, a clear, unambiguous picture emerges: when privacy or safety is implicated, schools have the authority to separate the sexes and enforce that separation so long as the facilities they provide for each sex are comparable.

But according to the United States, while schools “may provide separate restrooms for boys and girls,” G.G. ex rel. Grimm v. Gloucester Cty. Sch. Bd., 822 F.3d 709, 719 (4th Cir. 2016), they must “provide transgender students access to restrooms congruent with their gender identity,” id. at 717.

This interpretation would “mean that a school could never meaningfully provide separate restrooms and locker rooms on the basis of sex,” id. at 738 (Niemeyer, J., dissenting), in order to preserve the privacy interests protected by separate facilities.

By deferring to the United States' interpretation of Title IX and removing biological sex as a basis for maintaining separate locker rooms, showers, overnight lodging, and restrooms, the Fourth Circuit's decision effectively eliminates biological sex as a basis for schools to differentiate between students. As one court explained in a comparable context:

If [G.G. and the United States] were to prevail, then all sex-segregated restrooms and locker rooms would have to be abolished. The absence of sex-segregated spaces would stifle the ability of the [school district] to continue with a respected educational methodology. It follows too that those students and parents who prefer an education with sex segregated restrooms and locker rooms would be denied their freedom of choice....

It is not for us to pass upon the wisdom of segregating boys and girls in their use of restrooms and locker rooms. We are concerned not with the desirability of the practice but only its constitutionality. Once that threshold has been passed, it is the [school district's] responsibility to determine the best methods of accomplishing its mission.

Johnston v. Univ. of Pittsburgh, 97 F. Supp. 3d 657, 678 (W.D. Pa. 2015) (quotation omitted).

This Court has at least twice recognized that policies that take into account the biological differences between the sexes are constitutionally permissible in certain circumstances. See United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 533, 550 n.19 (1996) (recognizing that “[p]hysical differences between men and women ... are enduring,” and these differences would require the Virginia Military Institute to make “alterations necessary to afford members of each sex privacy from the other sex in living arrangements”);

Tuan Anh Nguyen v. I.N.S., 533 U.S. 53, 73 (2001) (“To fail to acknowledge even our most basic biological differences ... risks making the guarantee of equal protection superficial, and so disserving it.”). And it has also protected against intrusions upon the “subjective and reasonable societal expectations of personal privacy” in public school settings. Safford Unified Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Redding, 557 U.S. 364, 374-375 (2009) (ruling against school officials who required a student to “expose[] her breasts and pelvic area” as part of a search—which the student described as “embarrassing, frightening, and humiliating”).

This case presents a necessary extension of those previous decisions. “Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent support the conclusion that physiological differences between men and women give rise to the privacy interests that justify segregating bathrooms, showers, and other similar facilities on the basis of sex.” Carcano v. McCrory Berger, No. 1:16CV236, 2016 WL 4508192, at *21 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 26, 2016). This Court should grant certiorari to correct the appellate court’s failure to give proper consideration to the important privacy rights served by Title IX and its enacting regulation which delegate authority to local schools to protect student privacy by maintaining sex-specific facilities.

II. Students' Bodily Privacy Rights Bar the School Board From Opening Sex-Specific Locker Room, Shower, and Restroom Facilities to Members of the Opposite Sex.

Public school boards are “state actors” that must honor students’ constitutional rights. See, e.g., Morse v. Frederick, 551 U.S. 393, 424 (2007) (Alito, J., concurring) (“The public schools are invaluable and beneficent institutions, but they are, after all, organs of the State.”); New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 336 (1985) (“We have held school officials subject to the commands of the First Amendment, and the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.” (quotations omitted)). Those rights include the fundamental right of bodily privacy, which clearly applies to students. See, e.g., Sepulveda v. Ramirez, 967 F.2d 1413, 1416 (9th Cir. 1992) (“The right to bodily privacy is fundamental.”); Beard v. Whitmore Lack Sch. Dist., 402 F.3d 598, 604 (6th Cir. 2005) (“Students of course have a significant privacy interest in their unclothed bodies.”); Thomas ex rel. Thomas v. Roberts, 261 F.3d 1160, 1168 (11th Cir. 2001), vacated on other grounds by 122 S. Ct. 2653 (2002) (“[T]here is no question that schoolchildren retain a legitimate expectation of privacy in their persons, including an expectation that one should be able to avoid the unwanted exposure of one’s body, especially one’s ‘private parts.’”); Doe v. Renfrow, 631 F.2d 91, 92–93 (7th Cir. 1980) (“It does not require a constitutional scholar to conclude that a nude search of a thirteen-year-old child is an invasion of constitutional rights of some magnitude.”).

Opening communal boys' and girls' locker rooms, showers, lodging, and restrooms to members of the opposite sex would directly violate students' constitutional right to privacy. "[C]hildren are extremely self-conscious about their bodies." Cornfield v. Consol. High Sch. Dist. No. 230, 991 F.2d 1316, 1323 (7th Cir. 1993). This "adolescent vulnerability intensifies the patent intrusiveness of [bodily] exposure." Safford Unified Sch. Dist., 557 U.S. at 375. Requiring students to use the restroom and undress themselves in the vicinity of members of the opposite sex would necessarily be an "embarrassing, frightening, and humiliating" experience that would undermine their basic human dignity. Id. at 374-75.

Public schools have consequently always been empowered to avoid such damaging results to students' welfare, including in the face of misguided lawsuits, like this one, that wrongly claim that Title IX or the Equal Protection Clause mandate students be permitted to use the restroom of their choice. See, e.g., Kastl v. Maricopa Cnty. Cmty. Coll. Dist., 325 F. App'x 492, 493 (9th Cir. 2009) (rejecting a student's Title IX, Title VII, and First and Fourteenth Amendment arguments for opposite-sex restroom use because a public college was motivated by privacy and safety reasons, not the student's sex); Johnston, 97 F. Supp. 3d at 669 (noting that ensuring "the privacy of ... students to disrobe and shower outside of the presence of members of the opposite sex" is a "justification [that] has been repeatedly upheld by courts" in rejecting a student's Title IX and equal protection arguments for opposite-sex restroom use);

Texas v. United States, No. 7:16-CV-00054-O, 2016 WL 4426495, at *15 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 21, 2016) (The authority of schools to maintain separate restrooms and locker rooms on the basis of sex “undoubtedly was permitted because the areas identified by the regulations are places where male and female students may have to expose their nude or partially nude body, genitalia, and other private parts, and separation from members of the opposite sex, those whose bodies possessed a different anatomical structure, was needed to ensure personal privacy.”) (internal quotations omitted).

To amici’s knowledge, the only appellate court to hold to the contrary was the two-judge majority in G.G. ex rel. Grimm v. Gloucester County School Board. This Court should grant certiorari in order to affirm that providing truly sex-separated private facilities for male and female students falls well within the standard that “there are [anatomical] differences between males and females that the Constitution necessarily recognizes,” particularly when the right of bodily privacy is at stake. Michael M. v. Superior Court of Sonoma Cnty., 450 U.S. 464, 478 (1981) (Stewart, J., concurring).

III. Exposing Individuals to Members of the Opposite Sex in Places Where Personal Privacy is Expected is Forbidden by the Constitutional Right of Bodily Privacy.

The right of bodily privacy applies in any circumstance in which government action, including the application of nondiscrimination laws, would require the co-mingling of sexes in places where personal privacy is required and where the potential exists for exposing unclothed individuals to members of the opposite sex.

For example, the United States District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia rejected a female employee's sex-discrimination claim based on her employer's refusal to assign her to clean male "bath-toilet-locker-room facilities." Brooks v. ACF Indus., Inc., 537 F. Supp. 1122, 1125 (1982). It did so because "while using any of the bathhouses, the male employees had legitimate privacy rights that would have been violated by a female's entering and performing janitorial duties therein during their use thereof." Id. at 1132. Male employees, the court explained, had the right "to protect [their privacy] rights" by "insist[ing] that" biological females not have access to bathhouse facilities while they were in general use. Id. Even if separate changing and shower facilities were available, the court recognized that male employees "would still be unable to use the toilet facilities ... without suffering violation of their privacy rights." Id. at 1132. Indeed, one of the plaintiff's proposed "schemes" required the employer to "erect doors and/or walls which would obstruct the shower and toilet areas from her view." Id. The court rejected the feasibility or reasonability of this suggestion because building doors and walls "would merely divide the milieu in which the conflict exists rather than provide a solution to the conflict itself." Id.

Similarly, in Norwood v. Dale Maintenance

System, Inc., 590 F. Supp. 1410, 1417 (N.D. Ill. 1984), the court denied a woman's sex-discrimination complaint based on her private employer's refusal to allow her to clean male restrooms during the workday because "an opposite sex procedure would cause embarrassment and increased stress in both male and female washroom users (e.g., men would not be able to urinate if a woman were present in the men's washroom)" and "the invasion of privacy that would be created by an opposite sex procedure would be extreme." Once again, the court rejected a proposed solution whereby the restrooms would be closed during a scheduled time so that they could be cleaned by a member of the opposite sex.

As the evidence at trial demonstrated, privacy would be invaded to a degree under any opposite sex system. Even the least intrusive alternative, the scheduled closing of the washrooms each day, would still cause stress to tenants and guests when an attendant knocked on the opposite sex's washroom's door to determine if the washroom were in use. A person using the washroom at the time would not know if the attendant would, nevertheless, enter the washroom, not realizing the washroom was still in use.

Id. at 1422. Nor would a policy requiring "the attendant to leave the opposite sex washroom during the cleaning process whenever a person wishes to use the washroom" alleviate the privacy concerns, because "tenants would be faced with a greater probability of embarrassing or stressful confrontations with cleaning attendants of the opposite sex in their washroom.” Id. at 1422-23.

The same is true here. Denying certiorari and leaving the Fourth Circuit’s decision in place would result in students not being able to use the communal locker room, shower, lodging, or restroom facilities without forfeiting their constitutional privacy rights and experiencing the embarrassment and stress that accompanies being forced to perform intimate bodily functions in the presence (or potentially in view of) members of the opposite sex. Requiring the school board to add more walls or privacy barriers in the locker rooms and restrooms would do nothing to alleviate the underlying privacy concern, especially since the ruling would also apply to lodging on overnight school trips where students are often required to share a hotel room.

It is reasonable for all students to expect that when engaging in activities where privacy is desired—from using the restroom to changing and showering—they will exclusively be in the presence of classmates of the same sex. The radical redefinition of these norms would cause even greater stress or embarrassment than was present in the Brooks and Norwood cases, discussed above, where the rational fear of a female janitor walking into the men’s restroom created justifiable privacy concerns for the men. Just as the privacy rights of male employees trumped the interests of the female plaintiffs in those cases, the undeniable privacy interests of millions of school children across the country trump the United States' desire to mandate locker room, shower, and restroom access based on subjective perceptions of gender identity.

IV. Bodily Privacy Rights Preclude Opening Even Certain Sex-Specific Places of Public Accommodation to Members of the Opposite Sex.

Privacy rights do not apply merely in the employment context to permit certain sex-specific job assignments. “The point is illustrated by society’s undisputed approval of separate public rest rooms for men and women based on privacy concerns. The need for privacy justifies separation and the differences between the genders demand a facility for each gender that is different.” Faulkner v. Jones, 10 F.3d 226, 232 (4th Cir. 1993).

These privacy rights are robust enough to entirely shut the doors of certain sex-specific public accommodations to members of the opposite sex. A Pennsylvania court did just that in response to the state human rights commission’s efforts to force health clubs designed solely for women to open their doors to men. Livingwell (North) Inc. v. Pa. Human Relations Comm’n, 606 A.2d 1287, 1288 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1992). Indeed, the court recognized an automatic defense to sex-discrimination claims in any situation “where there is a distinctly private activity involving exposure of intimate body parts.” Id. at 1291. One of the reasons it did so was that otherwise “sex segregated accommodations such as bathrooms, showers and locker rooms would have to be open” to the opposite sex. *Id.*⁵

The court refused to take such a drastic step. Instead, it explained that “in relation to one’s body, there are societal norms, i.e., a spectrum of modesty, which one either follows or respects, and if one is required to breach a modesty value, one becomes humiliated or mortified.” Id. at 1292. Disregarding these essential modesty norms and causing feelings of mortification in other citizens is not a matter of simple discomfort, it “invade[s] the individual’s most fundamental privacy right, the right of privacy of one’s own body.” Id.

Significantly, the Livingwell court explained that the fundamental right of bodily privacy is “not determined by the lowest common denominator of modesty that society considers appropriate.” Id. at 1293. The state human rights commission’s efforts to “impose” a “different sense of modesty” on the public consequently failed because the purpose of sex-nondiscrimination laws “is to eliminate sex discrimination ... not to make over the accepted mores and personal sensitivities of the American people in the more uninhibited image favored by any particular” individual or group. Id. at 1294 (quoting Backus v. Baptist Med. Ctr., 510 F. Supp. 1191, 1195 (E.D. Ark. 1981)). Because no “overriding considerations” weighed against the “legitimate privacy interest” of “women who want[ed] to exercise at an all-female facility” and it was “impossible to allow men to be present while these women are exercising and, at the same time protect their right to privacy,” id., the court approved of banning males from health clubs designed solely for female customers.

⁵ Many state public accommodation laws provide broad exemptions for restrooms, locker rooms, and other public facilities where privacy is at issue, including within the Fourth Circuit See, e.g., Md. Code Ann., State Gov’t § 20-303(a)(2) (exempting facilities that are “(i) uniquely private and personal in nature; and (ii) designed to accommodate only a particular sex”); Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 46a-64(b)(1)(B) (“the prohibition of sex discrimination shall not apply to ... separate bathrooms or locker rooms based on sex”); 11 R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. § 11-24-3.1 (“Nothing contained in this chapter that refers to ‘sex’ shall be construed to mandate joint use of restrooms, bath houses, and dressing rooms by males and females.”); Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 489-4 (allowing separate facilities “for female and for male patrons” when needed “to protect personal rights of privacy”); 775 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 5/5-103 (exempting “restrooms, shower rooms, bath houses, health clubs and other similar facilities”); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 106.52(c) (“Nothing in this subsection prohibits separate treatment of persons based on sex with regard to public toilets, showers, saunas and dressing rooms for persons of different sexes.”).

This public-accommodations case teaches important lessons that are directly applicable to the matter at hand. First, bodily privacy rights are strong and robust enough to preempt even public accommodation laws designed to give equal access to public facilities. Other students’ constitutional right of bodily privacy thus poses a considerable barrier to G.G.’s claims. Second, the right of bodily privacy bars government from using sex-nondiscrimination laws to change traditional modesty standards. The point of sex-nondiscrimination legislation like Title IX is to grant students equal educational opportunities, not alter traditional practices and social norms designed to ensure student privacy, such as providing sex-specific restrooms and locker rooms, which many Title IX regulations specifically affirm. See supra p. 3 n.2. Third, the scope of bodily privacy rights is not determined by the most bohemian members of society. Some may consider their fellow students' modesty principles "old-fashioned," but that does not rob them of their constitutional privacy rights.

To be sure, communal unisex restrooms are not something even the vast majority of fully-fledged adults would be willing to accept. See, e.g., Sommers v. Budget Mktg., Inc., 667 F.2d 748, 748-49(8th Cir. 1982) (affirming ruling in favor of employer who terminated a male-to-female employee based on evidence that "a number of female employees indicated they would quit if Sommers were permitted to use the restroom facilities assigned to female personnel"); Etsitty v. Utah Transit Auth., 502 F.3d 1215, 1226-27 (10th Cir. 2007) (finding that an employer's termination of a male-to-female employee who desired to use the female restroom was justified where the employee's "restroom usage could become a problem" and the employer was legitimately "concerned about such complaints [over restroom usage] arising in the future").

V. Even in the Prison Context, the Constitutional Right of Bodily Privacy Forbids Regularly Exposing Unclothed Inmates to the View of Opposite-Sex Guards, and Students Have Much More Robust Privacy Rights.

Convicted prisoners "must surrender many rights of privacy.” Lee v. Downs, 641 F.2d 1117, 1119 (4th Cir. 1981). But the Fourth Circuit recognized over thirty years ago that the constitutional right of bodily privacy is so fundamental that it is not among them:

Most people ... have a special sense of privacy in their genitals, and involuntary exposure of them in the presence of people of the other sex may be especially demeaning and humiliating. When not reasonably necessary, that sort of degradation is not to be visited upon those confined in our prisons.

Id. “[D]espite the fact that the general employment of guards may be required to be open to persons of both sexes under equal employment opportunity legislation,” id. at 1119-20, the “right of privacy” prohibits stationing male guards “in rooms in which female prisoners [are] required to dress or undress,” id. at 1120. Vice versa, the constitutional right of privacy bans placing female guards “in positions to observe ... men while undressed or using toilets.” Id.; see also Strickler v. Waters, 989 F.2d 1375, 1387 (4th Cir. 1993) (“[W]hen not reasonably necessary, exposure of a prisoner’s genitals to members of the opposite sex violates [prisoners’] constitutional rights.”).

In short, the right of bodily privacy is so fundamental that even convicted prisoners daily benefit from its protection to ensure that they are not forced to change clothes, shower, or use the restroom in plain view of the opposite sex. See, e.g., Arey v. Robinson, 819 F. Supp. 478, 487 (D. Md. 1992) (noting that “[b]asic human dignity requires some minimal protection of privacy, at least from the opposite sex” and that “there is no alternative way for the prisoners to exercise this right of privacy than to be adequately shielded from view while performing ordinary bathroom functions”); Dawson v. Kendrick, 527 F. Supp. 1252, 1317 (S.D. W. Va. 1981) (ordering “that female prisoners ... be supplied with suitable sleepwear and be enabled to use the toilet and undress without being needlessly observed by male guards”); Hudson v. Goodlander, 494 F. Supp. 890, 893 (D. Md. 1980) (finding an inmates’ rights “were violated by the assignment of female guards to posts where they could view him while he was completely or entirely unclothed,” such as when “washing, undressing or performing other private functions”).

Certainly, what is constitutionally protected for prisoners can be no less protected in public schools. If inmates’ constitutional right to “privacy encompasses the ... interest in not being viewed unclothed by members of the opposite sex,” Teamsters Local Union No. 117 v. Wash. Dep’t of Corr., 789 F.3d 979, 990 (9th Cir. 2015) (quotations omitted), students’ constitutional right to bodily privacy does the same, see Poe v. Leonard, 282 F.3d 123, 136, 138-39 (2d Cir. 2002) (explaining that the right to privacy extends beyond the “context of prison confinement and search or seizure by the government” and that “there is a right to privacy in one’s unclothed or partially unclothed body, regardless of whether that right is established through the auspices of the Fourth Amendment or the Fourteenth Amendment”). Because leaving the Fourth Circuit’s decision in place would require other students to forego the essential right to bodily privacy, which even convicted prisoners maintain, this Court should grant certiorari to correct the appellate court’s error.

CONCLUSION

Given compulsory attendance laws, such as Virginia Code § 22.1-254, “[m]ost parents, realistically, have no choice but to send their children to a public school and little ability to influence what occurs in the school.” Morse, 551 U.S. at 424 (Alito, J., concurring). The job of safeguarding students’ fundamental rights therefore often falls to school boards. It would be no small irony to grant public schools the authority to shield children from “exposure to sexually explicit, indecent, or lewd speech,” Bethel Sch. Dist. No. 403 v. Fraser, 478 U.S. 675, 684 (1986), and safeguard the “privacy rights of students” in their school files, 20 U.S.C. § 1232g(a)(1)(D), but then deny officials the ability to protect students’ constitutional right to bodily privacy. Yet this is precisely the painful result of the Gloucester decision: local school officials may no longer protect their students from exposure to the opposite sex while using locker rooms, showers, restrooms, or even on overnight lodging for school trips. For the reasons explained above, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,
